GLENNECHOES

Foreword

In this publication of GLENNECHOES we have tried to capture memories of the past year. The friendship, the happiness, and the sorrows we have shared are expressed on the following pages. May they ever be a reminder of our days together at Glenn.

Dedication

To one who has been more than helpful to us through our high school years, for his understanding and kind encouragement when the going was a little rough, for his unnumbered contributions in pushing us toward our goal, we, the Senior Class, would like to show our gratitude and love by dedicating the 1956 publica-

CLASS POEM

Alas, but time does flee away,
T'will never stop nor even slows,
Alloted time to spend in school,
Too short it is and quickly goes.

We like to think our high school days,
Have been a howling success.
And all the time we could muster,
Was used to advantage------no less.

Our teachers have expressed to us,
And truly must confess
Some days were mostly howling,
And not so much success.

But from our studies and fellowship,
The treasures of wisdom we've learned,
Will always be cherished in memory,
As the best ever bought or earned.

Class History

It was exciting for everyone of us on that September day in 1952 as we at last entered the doors of Glenn High School, for we were now freshmen high school students. It was a new experience to meet many new people and to have more privileges in choosing our studies and our classes. This was the beginning of our class.

Our freshman year was spent learning the names and faces of our fellow classmates and slaving over English and algebra. There were not too many outside activities for us that year, for most of our time was spent in studying.

As we entered our sophomore year, we again settled down to studying, paying class dues, and working on projects to raise money for the Junior-Senior Banquet. In this year those who were going to lead us and be outstanding in extra-curricular activities and sports began to take their places.

Our junior year was indeed a happy one for there were thoughts of rings and banquets. Again we worked, selling different things, sponsoring singings, dances and other activities to raise more money for the Junior-Senior Banquet. It seemed an eternity before we received our class rings and even longer until that night in April when we, along with the seniors, gathered on the Balinese Roof of the Hotel Robert E. Lee for the Junior-Senior Banquet. It was not long, though, until we began to practice the Junior Processional for the graduation exercises.

At last came our senior year for which we had waited so long. Again we sold candy and Christmas cards, but for a different thing---our senior trip to Washington. There was also much work and studying to do, for we were finishing our high school education. As spring approached, our plans began to take shape, and on the 16th of April we boarded a bus and were on our way to Washington. On the 27th of April we attended the Junior-Senior Banquet.

Before we knew it, we were marching down the aisle with our caps and gowns donned to receive our diplomas and to be together for the last time. It was not altogether a happy moment, for now we would part and go our separate ways into the unknown future.

Who could express himself that night? There was joy, sorrow and pride in our hearts, but there was one thing for sure; we would never forget the many days which were spent at Robert B. Glenn High School.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

We, the Senior Class of Glenn High School, being sure of our intellectual power beyond and over our ratings, do hereby ordain and declare this our last will and testament.

ARTICLE I

To our beloved principal, Mr. Reece Shugart, we bequeath our kindest wishes and gratitude for the help and understanding he has shown us during our high school career.

ARTICLE II

To our Senior Class sponsors, Mrs. Oerter and Mr. Hennis, we wish to express our heartiest thanks for the effort, kindness and patience they have put forth on our behalf.

ARTICLE III

To the faculty, we leave our deepest gratitude for trying so desperately to put some knowledge into our . . . . heads.

ARTICLE IV

To the up and coming Seniors (the dear little angels) we leave our shining halos. We know we've set a perfect example.

ARTICLE V

I, Alton Teague, leave to Johnny Templeton my long Southern drawl, hoping that he will slow it down a bit.
I, Mary Ellen Walker, leave my desire to have a family of fifteen kids to Linda Shultz and Sadie Gortman who have ambitions along the same line.
We, Roma Smith and Martha Hanes, leave our everlasting friendship to anyone who thinks they could stand each other that long.
I, Carolyn Routh, will my position on "Cat Corner" to Dot White and Betty West. Oh - - - Da - - ddy - - o - - o - - o.
I, Virginia Britt, leave my quiet and studious ways to Francis Williard and Barbara Pooree.
I, Garner Mahaffey, leave my good looks and that "way with the women" to Paul McGraw and Robert Steel.
I, Jean Brown, leave my "love 'em and leave 'em ways" to Edwina Mason and Betty Lauten.
I, Hubert Clodfelter, leave my boisterous ways to Tony Kimball and Melvin Hicks.
To Robert Reid and Don Gibbons, we, Bobby Grindstaff and Wayne Gross, leave our places in the band, hoping they will continue beating out the boogie beat at the football games.
I, Jonnie Ellen Hine, bequeath my quiet and reserved ways to Ann Linville and Jerry Pegram, hoping they will put them into practice.
I, Dewey Hopkins, leave my typing skill to Gary Angel and Joe Prescott, hoping they will slow down.
I, Ralph Amos, will my ability to pick homecoming queens to Jimmy Worley.
I, Ann Anderson, leave my ability to pass bookkeeping to Thelma Hartsoe and Nancy Harp.
I, Norman Howerton, leave my "flirty ways" to Bobby and Billy Hilburn, hoping they have as much success as I did.
I, Almeda Bovender, leave my long blonde hair to Sandra Hester and Shelba Holder.
I, Benny Leonard, leave my bright sweaters to Carol York in the hope that I can keep an eye on her in a crowd.
I, Sarah Davis, leave my dry cut jokes to Shelby Johnson, hoping she gets as many laughs as I did.
I, Ann Mullis, leave my guitar playing and crooning of hillbilly songs to any girl who likes to make the boys swoon.
I, Bobby Moore, will all my girls friends to "Squeeky" Clodfelter and Tommy Lohr, especially the blondes.
I, Lewis Rothrock, leave my position on the football team to either Albert Cromer or Ray Weavil. Good Luck, Boys!
I, Jimmy Smith, leave my curly blonde locks to Ronald Payne and Terry Sapp.
I, Janet Kimball, leave my "Oh baby Line" to Cordelia Branch who can use some of my techniques.
I, Phyllis Reid, leave my dime-store career to Hilda Sales, hoping she gets richer than I did.
To Tommy Davis and Terry Sprinkle, I, Arnold Snyder, leave my intellectual ways, hoping they can fool the teachers.
I, Charles Stewart, leave my "cool dancing" to Pansy Smith.

To C. L. Vogler, I, David Swaim, will my book entitled, "How To Get A Woman In Ten Easy Lessons."
To Jim Linville, I Grady Teague, leave my height so Jim won't get lost in a crowd.
To Janice Reid and Terry Walser, I Wayne Vogler, leave my quiet studious ways.
I, Darwin Solomon, leave a few of my wolf-calls to my brother, Talmadge Solomon, who I'm sure will appreciate them.
I, Jo Ann York, have decided to leave my sweet smile to Loretta Ballard.
I, Gale Smith, the answer to the Eiffel Tower, leave my sky scraping height to Donald Stafford with a word of warning: no matter where your head may be keep your feet on the ground.
I, Sandra Sapp, leave my new edition of "Sandra Faces Life" (A book of her boy friend's troubles) to Carol Shields.
To Carol Bryant and Shirley Dills, I, Tommy Teague, leave my ability to be heard for miles around.
I, Lindsay Brown, leave my beautiful red curls to Danny Harris, who has tried so hard to acquire some.
I, Arnold Cope, bequeath my title "Biggest Flirt" to Joan Dewar who is sure to take the prize.
I, Barbara Templeton, leave my ability to handle the men to Linda Lou Smith. Good Luck!
I, Charles Enscore, will my bottle of "natures" spelled backward to Mary Crosson who we are sure will appreciate it.
To Pat Kinnamon, I, David Smith, will my ability to drive a Ford jalopy so she will be riding in style.
I, James Smith, bequeath my witty ways to Martha Davis.
I, Patsy Woods, leave my romantic ways to Sylvia Howerton.
I, Bernice Ledford, leave my mild manners to Sandra Masten.
I, Wallace Smith, bequeath my snappy answers in class to Grady Robbins and Carol Chappell.
To Alice McGinnis, I, Donald Snyder, leave my Ipana smile. (Or is it Colgate?)
I, Gayle Phillips, leave my come hither eyes to Kay Krites and Norma Freeman--Boys, beware.
I, Charles Walker, leave some of my brains to Peggy Baker so she won't have so much cramming to do before exams.
I, Geep Walker, leave my whistling and singing habits to Bobby Martin to catch his one and only like I did.
I, Ann Pierce, leave my enticing smile and flirtatious eyes to Pat Phipps and Becky Sapp. Look out if they put them to use.
I, Inez Idol, leave my height and ability to play basketball to Kay Ballard and Sadie Shields.
I Ronald Watson, leave my driving ability to Linda Motsinger with this advice: "Never exceed eighty-five."
I, Pat Wynn Kinnaman, leave to Emmie Griffin my ability to slip into my homeroom seat just as the bell rings.
I, Olene Swaim, leave my eye-catching figure to Pat Rowe and Barbara Shoaf.
I, Shirley Stinson, leave my gift of gab to Alma Richardson since there is plenty left for her.
I, Douglas Angel, leave my date book to Raymond Moore, hoping he will keep it up to par.
To Bobby Smith, I, Arnold Auman, leave my nickname "Sleepy." We hope you will like it.
I, Harold Willard, leave my tall, dark, handsome looks to Bobby Cook.
I, Laura Head, leave my smiling face and wonderful personality to Lynn Crews and Gayle Bennett who are fortunate enough to appreciate these qualities.
I, Larry Williard, leave my bashful ways to Julia Hutchins and Nancy Hedgecock.
I, Alan Wyatt, leave my undying love of English to Billy Johnson and Eugene Williams, and Kenneth Cox with a helpful piece of advice: Keep those midnight lamps burning.
I, Janice Lawson, leave my position as editor of the annual to anyone who desires gray hair at the age of seventeen.
I, Buddy Fore, leave my happy-go-lucky ways to Eugene McGee who already lives by the same rules.
I, Ann Smith, leave my babyish ways to Rachel Crews and Martha Seagraves to help them lose their seriousness.

ARTICLE VI

We hereby appoint two capable and honorable students, Roma Smith and Charles Walker, as our executrix and executor of this, our last will and testament, revoking all former wills.

In witness whereof, we do hereby affix our seal this twenty-ninth day of May, in the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and fifty-six.

It was a cold windy day in the year 1966. As we descended the steps of the huge passenger plane, we were both astounded by the long runways and many hangars that made up Smith-Reynolds Airport. We had been informed that it was one of the largest jet bases in the east, but it seemed gigantic compared to the airport that had been there ten years ago when we had boarded a plane to Europe.

Crossing the runway we began discussing our high school days and decided to find what all our classmates were doing. We stopped the first taxi we saw and as we were telling the driver our destination, we realized that it was none other than Larry Willard. After telling him we had been out of the country for the last ten years he began filling us in on the details. Don Snyder, a famous game hunter, had just returned from Africa where he had been hunting lions. While Don had been shooting lions, Olene Swaim and Inez Idol had been shooting basketball with the world famous Globehoppers. Larry next informed us that Gayle Phillips had gone to New York to make ballet dancing her career and Louis Rothrock was the matinee idol of thousands of teenagers.

We also discovered that cupid had been working overtime. Phylis Reid had married an army sergeant and moved to Florida and Laura Head had trapped a Texas oil millionaire. We weren't surprised that Martha Hanes was now Mrs. Wayne Bailey.

Soon we reached our destination, thanked Larry for the informative ride and set out to buy a newspaper and reserve a hotel room. Walking down the street we met Mary Ellen and Geep Walker and their nine little stairsteps. After talking to them we continued down the street where we saw a large department store which was owned by Benny Leonard. As we proceeded down the street, we heard a familiar voice. It was David Swaim using his good looks and strong voice to sell newspapers. We stopped, picked up a local paper and saw on the front page a picture of North Carolina's new governor, Charles Walker, standing with his campaign manager, Charles Stewart, the celebrated laywer.

The story of the heroic rescue of two children was in the headlines. Fire Chief Ralph Amos had saved the lives of the children of Ronald Watson.

Turning to the Sports Section we found a picture of Norman Howerton, the famous baseball pitcher, who had just signed a five year contract with the New York Yankees. As we were reading captions under the pictures we noticed that Tommy Teague was taking pictures for the paper. We always wondered why Tommy spent so much time in the dark room.

After finishing the paper we said goodbye to David and began to search for a hotel room. The hotel we chose was a large ultramodern building. Stopping at the desk we were surprised to find Joann York working as the desk clerk. We asked Joann to direct us to the manager whom we were soon to find out was Douglas Angel. Douglas began telling how he and Alton Teague, the well-known architect, had designed and built the hotel. Douglas also said that Wayne Gross, Bobby Grindstaff and Lindsey Brown, three more of the boys with whom we had graduated, had formed a small dance band and were beating out time to the tunes of the popular song writer, Sandra Sapp. They were appearing in his floorshow that night and were featuring as soloist none other than Barbara Templeton.

We explained to Douglas that we were testing our detective instincts by trying to find out what all our old classmates were doing. Douglas said that Janet Kimball was the best source of information in town.

The next morning we got an early start and set out to find Janet. We found her working at a radio station as an announcer. After all the usual greetings, Janet began talking so fast we could hardly keep up with her (same ole Janet).

Almeda Bovender and Virginia Britt had gone to Colorado and established a Lonely Hearts Club for poor souls like us.

James and Wallace Smith had formed the Smith Tombstone Company. Wallace is in charge of the verse department and James is in charge of the size and shape of the stones which hold down the heads of people.

Some of the girls had also followed the medical profession and were making incisions and patching them up. Roma Smith was head nurse at Walter Reed Hospital and Jonnie Hine and Bernice Ledford were working at a local hospital.

PROPHECY

Janet then informed us that David Smith and Patsy Wood had been looking around for an office to hang their shingles on. They had both gone to school and studied to be dentist. "Hold on to your chair, patients."

Working as auctioneers were Dewey Hopkins and Grady Teague. Who would have ever thought they could talk that fast.

Ann Pierce, a real crazy blonde, was using her good looks to impress the whole world by working for one of the leading designers in France.

While everyone else had been forming businesses, Arnold Cope had become the youngest five-star general in history and Wayne Vogler had become a member of the U. S. Navy. Wayne never did like water but we hear he has become interested in the WAVES.

Ann Smith and Sara Davis, two of the secretarial students, were now employed by the Western Electric Company in Winston-Salem.

A few of the boys were using their muscles to make a living. Alan Wyatt, a professional wrestler, was getting his head pounded against the canvas quite often, and Hubert Clodfelter was the World Champion weight lifter. If you were enemies of these boys you had better keep your distance.

Using their crazy antics to make people laugh were Bobby Moore and Jimmy Smith, who were well-known comedians.

Janet continued to tell us about the rest of the class. Buddy Fore, who was a real sports car fan, was designing his own cars and Garner Mahaffey was one of the major stock car drivers in the world.

Shirley Stinson and Ann Mullis had combined their talents and were operating a large beauty salon.

Trying to make Winston-Salem a safer city in which to live, Arnold Snyder was directing traffic on the corner of Fourth and Main Streets. Boy, how he must have changed.

Darwin Solomon was now the president of a large company which furnished transportation to the moon. He was designing his own space ships and sending them to the moon and other planets loaded with people who were going to make their homes there.

One of the girls, Pat Kinnamon, who had taken the fatal step before she finished school, was still happily married and was chasing eight small children around a penthouse in New York.

Janice Lawson has been very busy for the last few years. She has recently become editor of one of the leading fashion magazines.

Arnold (Sleepy) Auman had finally gathered enough energy to get a job. He was testing matresses in a local department store.

The West had attracted Harold Willard, who was running one of the most popular dude ranches in Texas.

One of the most frequent visitors to the stork room of General Hospital was Charles Enscore who was now the proud papa of nine little boys. At that rate he will have a football team in two or three more years.

Janet concluded her rundown on the class of 156 by telling us that Gale Smith and Ann Anderson had gone to Canada and were employed as travel agents.

After thanking Janet for the information, we departed to catch the next plane out of town. From Winston-Salem we were going to fly back to Europe to continue working as foreign correspondents.

Haven't these past three year been loads of fun? I've enjoyed meeting and knowing you especially. Even if you do go to Reynolds next year, we'll miss you and I hope you'll come back to see us and don't forget us.

Best of luck in everything you ever do for if anyone deserves it you certainly do deserve it. Stay just as sweet and cute as you are now and you'll succeed in all you do.

Love,
